

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

- Line defects are removed from an image by providing image data in digital form, analyzing segments of the image data as groups of pixels, detecting line defects in the
- 5 image by application of a line detector, such as a local radial angular transform, and adjusting the image data to correct the detected line defects within the determined limits.

T09070" 67400660